DESCRIPTIONS

King Corn: Two all-American kids try to learn about where our food comes from by growing and selling their own acre of corn. In doing so, they learn some troubling things about our contemporary food system.

Food Inc.: U.S. agribusiness produces more food on less land and at a cheaper cost than the farmers with any other nation. What could possibly be wrong with that? Plenty. Come learn what's behind the scenes of our modern day food industry in this shockingly informative documentary.

Our Daily Bread: Welcome to the world of industrial food production as it occurs today in Europe. This portrait told through slow moving images without dialogue presents a strange world of inhuman landscapes and spaces. In the end it forces us to reconsider what and how we eat.

Chicken Run: Will Ginger the chicken ever escape from the chicken farm? Will her love-interest, Rocky live up to his promises? And will Mr. and Mrs. Tweedy have their heads? Join us for this award-winning clay-mation movie that offers a fun time to kids and adults alike.

Super Size Me: Filmmaker Morgan Spurlock eats only McDonald's food for 30 days straight. Come see what he learns about the obesity epidemic, processed foods, and how we as a nation are eating ourselves to death.
